Intervention– EBP

EMDR Therapy on Sexually abused kids and adolescence will be an effective way to treat trauma. The idea of EMDR is to mimic new connections between unprocessed memory along with more adaptive information that is already present in other memory networks. It was given the title as a type of psychological treatment, especially under the category of Trauma and PTSD (Studies by Bisson and Andrew 2007). The reason this therapy is beneficial for youth especially, is because it does not require for the patient to describe the details of the trauma, there is no “homework,” and no level of intelligence is required.

The reason it is important to treat a person’s trauma is that after a traumatic experience, especially kids with a PTSD (conduct disorder) can eventually be diagnosed with ADHD by being diagnosed with PTSD, or any trauma, are often put in Youth Protection Services (YPS). Kids under YPS are found to have a greater chance of having behavioral/emotional problems, less likely to engage in school (especially in the more challenging material), and are less likely to pursue a further education (Studier found from Association des Centres Jeunesse du Quebec).

CBT Therapy on sexually assaulted youth victims will be affected in ways that they won’t know how to cope with their thoughts and emotions. They will develop trust issues and be able to open up about their trauma.

Through a therapist who is licensed to perform CBT, will promote two important things “ an open, safe space for a relationship to be formed between the victim and the therapist. Secondly, for the victim to feel safe enough to retell his or her story” (Majok, 2020). This way, the therapist can help the kid heal by being able to overcome negative thoughts regularly, and regain feeling self worth.

The reason why this is important is because most adolescents feel at fault for the traumatic event that happened to them. They feel trapped or unsure what to expect from their peers if they have found out. Through the program that is being created, victims can feel safe by getting help, rather than hiding their feelings by dropping from school, joining gangs, or substance usage. To teach them there are ways to heal.

Evaluation Plan

Qualitative-Quantitative Evaluation

Relation to Mission-Statement – Research Question
Are the numbers of youth sexual assault reports rising? Are youth becoming more aware of the topic? Do you think Pima County have enough resources and support? Are the youth and the community of Pima County educated about topics of sexual assault/harmony and how to deal with it?

Research Question – Research Question
Workshops: Our techniques of visiting schools in the area are much needed because parents (parent permission and permission classes) out of town, friends, and volunteers will provide help and information about sexual assault for youth and present the different resources. Warriors of Today will provide you with resources, their families, outreach, and community. The special training will cause an increase in traditional new clients, more children/humans have been assaulted, but because not all of you have seen the topic and resources to report it. This will cause the community of Pima County in talk about. Heroes of Today talk with each other, and other youth on the main topic on the subject.

On-site design: Keeping track of the number of situations for school and community awareness classes will allow us to measure the amount of people who have been educated on the topic. Keeping track of the intake numbers will allow for the number of youth and families reaching out for support. This will also help measure the idea of gathering community, stated in our mission statement.

Analysis Techniques: Every month the Board of Directors will have meetings specifically for analyzing the numbers that measure reports and awareness. If numbers are un where we want, we will always discuss our way to spread the word, as well as finding ways to continue. Heroes of Today is a great resource to reach out to.

Quality of Analysis

Relevance to Mission-Statement – Research Question
Given situation of Today create hope, heal, advocate, Nurses, Give community, and empower youth who has been sexually assaulted in Pima County/Outliers/Minority (Du Pontel and Du Pontel) and level of measurement. The number of youth who report a bullying process in their life within the program.

Intent of the analysis: To ensure our youth deals with the trauma alone, provide community awareness, give communities to youth who have experienced sexual trauma and give a voice to youth survival to prevent the next generation of youth. (Jeunesse du Quebec) through their rights.

Per year: Find what therapy programs work best for clients to take a lifetime Qatar given to better determine what areas they need help.

Per week: Clients will benefit from the therapy session and have resources to come back when needed again.

Analysis Techniques: The analysis will be completed from the therapist's results, along with any surveys our patients have taken in order to improve the program. Board of Directors will analyze these results (2 times a month). Admissions: patient will be admitted to a new patient's usual therapy to enter a rehabilitation programming's on how to create a finding, thinking, feeling improvement in, etc. The daily diary will be a variable to help determine if they are improving through the program. (Therapist will check once a week).
